Introduction

Hands Up For Excellence! is a short professional development course in London for stakeholders in education who believe the best we can do for all our children is the very least we must do.

Across the world, teachers have few doubts about the real purpose of their chosen profession – to offer every child in their care an outstanding education – one that gives access to knowledge and skills, opens up opportunities and choices, increases life chances and, perhaps above all, lights up the way towards personal achievement and dignity.

These aims are worthy enough, endorsed in most good schools and widely shared among parents. But, though the principles are simple, putting them into daily excellent classroom practice is far from easy.

Educational excellence, to carry society forward through times of rapid economic and technological change, is vital, becoming ever more desirable with each passing year. The nation needs it, schools claim it, parents demand it – and children happily put their hands up for their fair share of it! But only teachers can discover how excellence is to be achieved.

This brochure describes a short, intensive course of professional development for teachers and educators committed to the future Nigeria's children deserve.

The Course

Our course has been designed deliberately to guide delegates along the elusive path that leads from competence towards excellence. Each of the five days will have a specific theme rising from work with early-years and primary children, intensively explored to inform, to challenge and to inspire.

DAYS

- Teaching pupils with special needs.
- Recognising difficulties.
- Overcoming barriers.
- Strategies and techniques for improving literacy and numeracy.
- Integrating special-needs work within the community.

2

- Early Years Foundation Stage.
- Addressing the seven areas of learning and development.
- Giving a strong start in literacy, numeracy and cognition.
- The learning environment in school and at home.
- The place of technology.
- School administration and leadership.

3

- Assessments for learning in Key Stages 1 and 2.
- 'Quality first' teaching with emphasis on literacy and communications embedding technology.
- Creative lessons design.
- Does fun have a place in schooling?

4

- More on Key Stages 1 and 2.
- 'Quality first' teaching with emphasis on numeracy and cognitive development.
- Embedding technology.
- Creative lessons design.
- Creativity and fun.
- School administration and leadership.

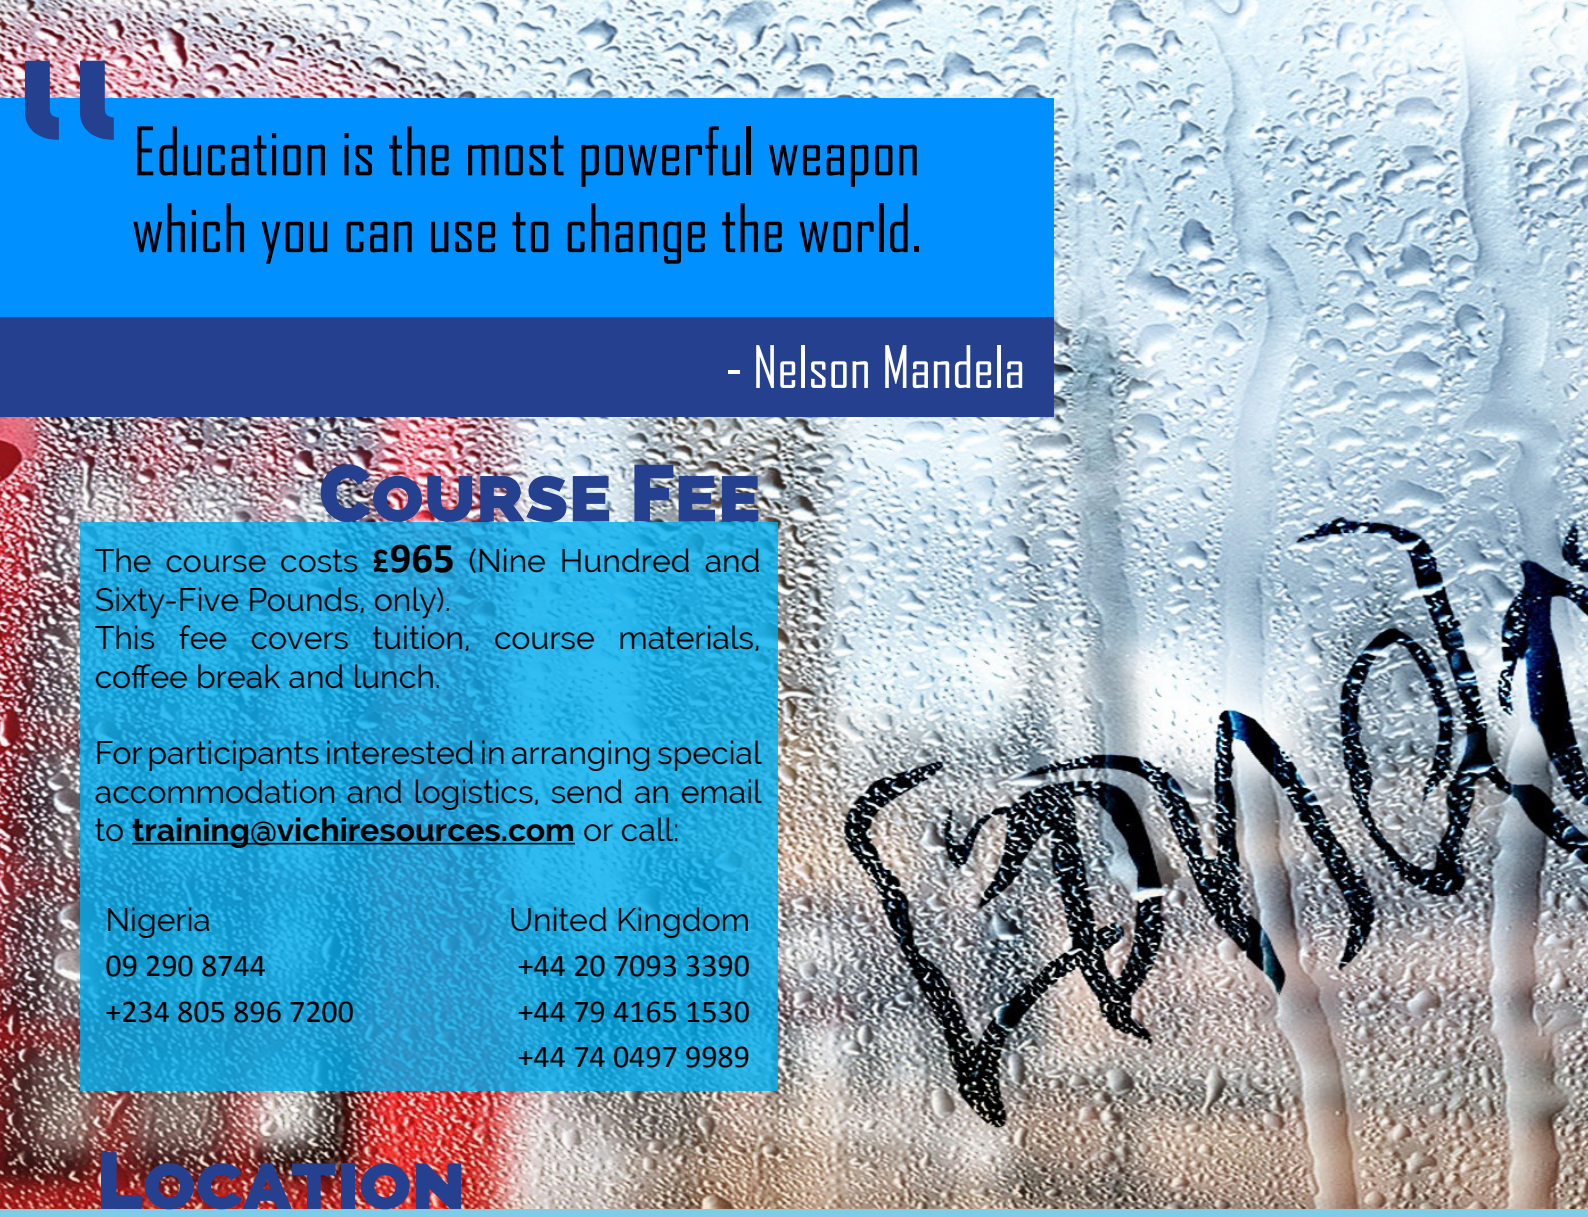

5

- The place of early education in society, community, the family and for the child's future.
- School and community.
- Understanding how the family functions and supporting education when it doesn't.
- Can there be education where children don't reach school?

Delegates will observe classes regularly throughout the course, and each day will close with a plenary discussion on applying fresh ideas in established practice in Nigeria.

Location

The course will take place at Culloden Primary, Old Ford Primary, and Solebay Primary, in the London Borough of Tower Hamlets under the leadership of Executive Principal Amanda Phillips CBE, these Paradigm Trust schools have earned a glowing reputation for excellent results and 'best practice' in teaching, learning and positive engagement with parents and their communities.

The Paradigm Trust wholeheartedly believes that access to a first-class education is the right of every child in east London, regardless of family circumstances, ethnicity, religion or gender.

Delegates will see at close hand through the first four days how this belief is pursued in the classroom by senior teachers and their colleagues.

Families in Tower Hamlets vary widely not only in their cultural, ethnic and religious backgrounds but also in levels of income and abilities to cope with social norms. Poverty, deprivation and familial dysfunctionality place heavy demands on schools and local government services. The Borough has an outstanding team which specialises in family-support practice, whose leaders will facilitate sessions on the final day of the course, and pose that most challenging of all questions any teacher could face – what happens to children who cannot reach a school?

Duration

The duration of the course is for five days from 27th of June - 1st of July, 2016.

Feedback From 2015

Last year's 'Hands up for Excellence!' had in attendance school owners and teachers from various schools around Nigeria. This professional development training proved a very rewarding experience as expressed by the participants.

Having the privilege to go round the three schools and learn ways to improve the way I teach in class was really original and this has formed a lasting impression on me as a person. Also, I gained a lot from the training sessions we have had especially on the parents' intervention program. Overall, I think I have enjoyed the programme and haven't really noticed any lapses about it.

Joy

I liked everything about the course because it was a whole new and wonderful experience for me. It was a good and wonderful experience to see teaching done in a different way from where I come from. I love the passion I saw in all the teachers, head teachers and subject coordinators. It was really motivating for me and I told myself that I will come again and again.

Simi

The tour and talk from Culloden and Old Ford School was amazing.

Pat

I really liked the last phase which focused on family as it affects education and the society at large.

Vou

Coming to London has been so good, what I like best about the course is the way we were allowed to go into the classes and learn from the teachers.

Gladys

I had an amazing time, I really enjoyed the course it opened my eyes to a lot of things especially the early years which was extremely beautiful and also learning on a different level. It was worth the effort of coming here to the UK and leaving my school to achieve this training. The tour around the schools was extraordinary.

Useful Ideas for Delegates

Our accommodation centre and the three schools are all situated in the London Borough of Tower Hamlets, close to the City and Canary Wharf financial centres, and within easy reach of several well-known shopping districts including Stratford City and the 'West End'. But London's visitors pour into this capital city to enjoy a host of other attractions – the visual arts, theatres, music and dance, museums and libraries, sporting events, architecture and open spaces among them. Stalwart Communities will encourage and help delegates experience a little of London beyond their week of professional work.
It's just as true of teachers as of children at their schools – if there's fun in it, hard work is more likely to be successful and memorable! London is one of the world's 'great fun' cities – and definitely not to be missed for that!

VISA APPLICATIONS

Stalwart Communities will provide formal support for visa applications to visit the United Kingdom. The visitor's visa will not allow a holder to apply for or carry out any work, paid or unpaid. Delegates are strongly advised to arrange funds for all the expenses of spending additional time in the United Kingdom.

TRAVEL AND ACCOMMODATION

Advantageous group travel will be arranged for delegates, including international flights and for local journeys to and within east London. For the duration of the course itself, accommodation will be on a single site close to the schools – to encourage participants to share experiences and ideas.

HEALTH

Stalwart Communities will ensure delegates can see a good doctor in case of need during the course, without charge; however, there may be charges for further consultations, treatments or medicines. In the event of a more serious emergency the National Health Service will always provide immediate treatment and care, but will expect to recover costs from visitors. Delegates are strongly advised to set up personal health insurance before travelling.

SECURITY

Other than those associated with all large cities, modern London does not present special risks for the modest and sensible visitor. Cash and personal documents always deserve special care, and high-cost items such as laptops are best kept close at hand. Public officials on duty are invariably reliable, and do not expect or ask for payment for advice and help.

CLIMATE AND COMFORT

The month of July, in London, is generally regarded as the end of spring and start of summer. But weather conditions are notoriously difficult to predict. Cool breezes and rain showers are common; daytime temperatures are unlikely to be much higher than twenty degrees Celsius, with evenings even less warm. Delegates will do well to consider this when deciding what clothes to bring with them.
